Jordan & Care

Care Elise is a magician, entertainer, and educator. A UBC graduate, Care has been teaching classes and participatory workshops in storytelling and writing for over ten years. She has trained in the OG method and has worked with ELL and SLD students and high risk youth through the BC Ministry of Children and Families. She believes magic provides a memorable, multi-sensory approach to engage learning and reinforce core competencies.

Jordan Vo has been a magician, musician and theatrical entertainer for over twelve years. He has also worked with high-risk youth through the BC Ministry of Children and Families and has experience performing and teaching magic workshops to elementary and high school students. Jordan focuses on his audience's needs. His magic often happens in the hands of his spectators, so that they experience a sense of "winning" to foster inclusion and self-confidence.

LEARNING WITH MAGIC

Tailoring magic & storytelling workshops, classes, & events to your curriculum needs

Learning magic as an art

(Recommended ages 8+)

Learning the art of magic can help build self-confidence, communication and interpersonal skills.

Our magic classes focus on building presentation and speaking skills, and using magical effects as a vehicle for students to write and tell their own stories more effectively. We also offer a specialized program teaching the magical arts for upper level ELL students.

Available as a one time workshop, or six session class followed by a showcase of the students' achievements.

Why Magic?

"Education, at its most engaging, is a performance art" – Teller

We subscribe to this philosophy. We believe that magic provides a memorable multi-sensory experience that enriches learning.

"Thank you again for the enchanting and magical performances. The students LOVED your readings and we're just baffled and in awe of Jordan's brilliant magic show."

Dita Verma – Teacher Librarian

Using magic as a demonstration

Magic can support classroom learning by fueling the imagination, anchoring concepts in long term memory, and piquing interest for areas of further independent study.
